EIGHTH REPORT

OF THE

COMMITTEE

OF THE

HIBERNIAN SOCIETY.

IT is a recollection which ought to excite regret, that, during the past ages of Christianity, unnumbered millions of immortal minds have come into existence, lived in a state of consummate ignorance, as to the chief end of their being, and passed into the eternal world, without having been shewn, by any of their fellow-men, the true way of salvation! During the last century, a degree of sympathy on this melancholy subject was excited, and some exertions were made. These, though highly laudable in themselves, were, till of late years, by far too partial and confined. It was reserved for our times, and the times that will succeed us, that the waters of religious and moral instruction should flow as rivers in the wilderness, and as streams in the desert—that the way of the Lord should be made plain—that the glory of the Lord should be revealed—and that endeavours, on a comprehensive scale, should be made, that “all flesh should see it together.” The Christian’s perspective has, of late years, been much improved. The party colouring, which formerly rendered his view indistinct, is almost absorbed, and the field of vision is also vastly enlarged. Christians of every name have begun to feel it their duty, and to find it their pleasure, not only to relieve, as they have opportunity and ability, the distress they meet with at their own doors; but to enlarge the sphere of their beneficence, assigning it no limits but the boundaries of the world.

It is now a subject of notoriety, that the field, in which Christians ought to have long ago more adequately labored, is immensely large, and that many parts of it, even at this late period of the world, continue uncultivated, and therefore unfruitful. Some portions of it are still covered with “the dens of every species of ravenous beasts—the cages of every kind of unclean birds”—the habitations of paganism and cruelty!

The mind of every liberal Christian will survey this field in the length and in the breadth of it; and that his charity may be diffusive, he will not only aid the endeavours which are made to set up altars to the true God, in countries very remote from England, but will feel it to be an imperious duty to give his personal, or at least his pecuniary assistance, for the culture of a district that is nearer home.

Our own country is a garden, which the Lord’s right hand hath planted—which he daily waters—and wherein he is, and will be glorified; but on the very borders of it, we see a comparatively uncultivated district, overgrown with briars and thorns. A narrow channel only divides us from an island, in which the religious and intellectual condition of the poor is vastly inferior to that of the same class of society in Great Britain.

The Irish have not yet felt, as we have, the benign effects of the glorious Reformation. Popery has, to this hour, maintained her strong holds among them. The great mass of that people is still held in subjection to a degrading superstition. Four-fifths of the population of Ireland are adherents to the Church of Rome: and it is melancholy to have the occasion of remarking, that of late years, in some districts, great accessions to the Catholic religion have taken place from among Protestants; owing to the numbers, and the energy of the former, and the paucity and supineness of the latter. The Protestant has received, till very lately, little, if any support from popular feeling and opinion; and therefore has been far less efficient in proselyting men from Popery, than the Catholic has been in converting them to it. At this very day, hundreds of thousands of our fellow subjects and near neighbours, are "carried away with dumb idols, even as they are led;" as sheep wandering on the dark mountains of error, guided by shepherds who do not lead them in the paths of truth and righteousness—under the control of those, who would keep out of their hands the key of knowledge, who themselves "hate instruction, and do not choose the fear of the Lord." To the Irish peasantry, the Holy Scripture has hitherto been, by Catholic domination, "a spring shut up, and a fountain sealed." With an intellect capable of a high degree of culture, the Irish Catholic poor would remain, while subject to the Priesthood of their own Church, in the most consummate ignorance of the attributes and perfections of the blessed God—of their true state in his sight, as moral and accountable agents—and of their need of the internal religion of the heart, and the gracious guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Of late years, blessed be God! light has gleamed forth upon a country, which has for ages and generations sat in the region and shadow of death. Thousands are now obtaining from the Holy Scriptures that instruction, which, we hope, will unfetter their minds, and lead them into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Your Committee having, at a Special General Meeting of the Society in February last, received it in charge, to give all their energy, and expend all their means, for the purpose of enabling the poor to draw water for themselves out of these wells of salvation, will henceforth direct their undivided attention to this important object. The operations of the Society being thus simplified, all occasion of conscientious scruple is removed, and Christians of every name, it is presumed, will cheerfully concur in promoting this labor of love.

The positive good afforded to the poorer classes in Ireland, by means of the instruction given in the Society's Schools, has, in every instance, refuted the problematic and most nefarious assertions, which have been announced as oracles at the altars of the Popish Hierarchy. Almost all those who have, at the moment, been so terrified by the anathema's of their Priests, as to remove their children from the Schools, have, after a few weeks of reflection, completely recovered from their panic, and, in defiance of the censures of their Church, again put their children under the tuition of the Society. The result of these temporary defections has proved, that as the good produced by the Schools has increased, the influence of the opposing Priests has in the same proportion diminished. While however it must, with regret, be acknowledged, that much hostility is still manifested by some of the Catholic Priests to the Schools established in their district; yet is it far from being so general, so avowed, or so effective, as formerly.

Your Committee have no reason to regret having adopted the plan of employing Catholic Schoolmasters, under the express stipulation, that no book should be read in the Schools, but the Society's Spelling-book, containing scriptural lessons, and the English or Irish Testament. These books are constantly and exclusively used. All the Catholic Teachers in their employ, strictly adhere to this rule. It is with pleasure the Committee can add, that some of them have so felt the force of religious truth, through reading the Scriptures, while instructing their pupils, as to renounce the errors in which they were educated, with a decision of mind and judgment, happy for themselves, encouraging to the Society, and helpful as examples to the children and adults around them.

In order to ascertain the fidelity of the Schoolmasters to their engagements with the Society, as well as to fix upon the minds of the children the truths of Scripture, the Inspectors invariably direct, that suitable portions of it should be committed to memory; and thus the children are assisted to lay up in store a good foundation against the time to come.

It will be pleasing to the Members of this Institution to learn, that the benefit resulting from the Schools is now become so obvious, that it has occasioned, during the past year, a large accession of Clergymen and Gentlemen of respectability and influence, residents in Ireland, who enter cordially into the views of the Society, and who encourage and patronise this plan of education in their respective neighbourhoods. Some have also been induced to establish Schools, on a similar principle, on their own estates, or in their own parishes. These individual exertions, where it has been requisite, have been aided by Testaments, Spelling-books, and pecuniary Grants from this Society.

It is truly gratifying to the Committee to be able to state, that, by the Society's means, the Holy Scriptures are already introduced into ONE HUNDRED and FORTY-FIVE Schools, most of which have been opened since the last Annual Report. These Schools are principally to be found in the Counties of Sligo, Mayo, Leitrim, Fermanagh, Donegal, Galway, Roscommon, Tipperary, and Carlow. They comprise no less than EIGHT THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED and FORTY-TWO children of both sexes, who are daily receiving instruction in the important truths of Divine Revelation, and, instead of remaining in the grossest ignorance, are taught, like Timothy, the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make them wise unto salvation.

Besides the direct benefit communicated to these children, in opening to them the treasures of Divine Wisdom, much collateral good results to the poor in the benighted parts of Ireland. The scriptural instruction afforded to the children at the Schools, is diffusing itself daily through the cabins of the adults. Thus the Society's efforts become an important medium of circulating the word of life among the Catholic population. The minds of many have thereby been opened, and they have been induced to examine for themselves the contents of the Holy Scriptures. The Irish Testament has become highly acceptable, and in some instances spiritually useful. It ought not to be forgotten that the work of the Reformation, in this country, commenced and was confirmed, under God, mainly and essentially by the common people receiving a disposition, and obtaining an opportunity, to read for themselves the Word of Life. We hope for similar results respecting Ireland, as the minds of the people appear to be directed with eagerness towards the Sacred Volume. This circumstance has, indeed, excited the jealousy of the Priests, who wished much to weaken the credit of the authorised versions of the New Testament, both English and Irish, loading them with opprobrious epithets, and condemning them as heretical. In consequence of this, a formal comparison was made by Catholics themselves between the Rhemish (or Douay) Testament, viewed as legitimate by the Romish Church, and the Irish Testament used in the Schools. The result has been that the latter is acquitted of the charge of heresy brought against it by its enemies.

The Committee have now to acknowledge the assistance which they have received, in various ways, during the past year, for the prosecution of the important service in which they are engaged.

To the BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY, the Hibernian Schools are indebted for two several grants of copies of the Scriptures, in the whole, of 350 Bibles—2500 English and 600 Irish Testaments.

From the FIFE AND KINROSS-SHIRE Auxiliary Bible Society, the Committee have received a grant of Bibles and Testaments to the amount of Fifty Pounds.

Similar grants have been made from the PAISLEY Bible Society of Ten Pounds, from the BRECHIN Bible Society of Five Pounds, and from that at BRISTOL of Two Guineas.

TO the NORTHERN MISSIONARY SOCIETY at Tain, the Committee are indebted for an additional donation of Fifty Pounds.

The AMICABLE SOCIETY for benevolent purposes, has also allotted to this Society the sum of Five Guineas.

The Committee wish, in this place, to acknowledge the great pecuniary assistance they have received by various Congregational Collections in many parts of England and Scotland, chiefly through the labours of Ministers who have travelled for that purpose. Liberal Donations have also been received from benevolent individuals, the particulars of which will appear in the Appendix to this Report.

In addition to the HOXTON Auxiliary Hibernian Society and the ASSOCIATION, mentioned in the last Report, the Meeting will be gratified at being informed, that two similar Societies have been instituted in the Metropolis within the last year, besides minor Associations for the same purpose; together with various Auxiliary Societies in different parts of the country; particularly at Glasgow, Edinburgh, Manchester, Great Yarmouth, Ashford, and Chatham.

While your Committee feel highly gratified at the auxiliary assistance the Society has already received, they most earnestly hope that the cause of the Irish Poor, who yet remain ignorant and out of the way, will be more generally considered, and more liberally patronised. The Committee are thankful to God, from whom all holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works do proceed, and they congratulate the Society on having nearly overcome the difficulties incident to every new endeavour. The soil has been prepared, much seed has been sown, and, through the mercy of God, "the fields are white already to harvest." Are we not admonished by the Head of the Church, to pray the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest? Dare any Christian willingly omit to offer this supplication on behalf of the thousands of ignorant and perishing children in Ireland? And dare we pray that laborers may be sent, while we keep, locked up in our own stores, what would be needful to support them? The Society can instantly call a multitude of laborers, and put every one into full employment, if the public will entrust it with the means of paying them their hire. Shall the harvest then be lost, and the laborers continue idle, while we have enough and to spare? Let our prayers and our alms unite together, to further this work of God. The EIGHT THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED and FORTY-TWO Children now in your Schools, great and encouraging as it is to record, is a number very disproportionate to the TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND, who still remain ignorant, and who seem to cry, "Come over into Ireland, and instruct us."

Let it be remembered, if we sleep, the enemy will not cease to sow the prolific soil with noxious weeds; the seeds of which, if suffered to mature on the waste places of Ireland, will continue to be wafted over into our cultivated fields, and, in proportion to their quantity, deteriorate our own harvest. The proximity of Ireland, while it gives peculiar facility to the unceasing and enlarging endeavours of the HIBERNIAN SOCIETY, does, at the same time, render such endeavours imperiously necessary. And will Protestants justify their apathy, or neglect to use competent energy, where it may be so usefully employed? We cannot do good to the people of Ireland, without good returning into our own bosoms. On the orderly and christian behaviour, to which the Irish peasantry may be habituated in their youth, will depend the state of character in the countries to which they migrate. Ireland supplies a large proportion of our daily laborers; and hence, according to their measure of instruction, or their absolute want of it, will they bring with them a pestiferous or a salutary conduct. Multitudes of the Irish have been fighting our battles by land and by sea, many of whom, through the want of instruction, appear to have lived and died destitute of the true knowledge of themselves or the Saviour.

The Committee cannot but congratulate the Society, on its meeting together, for the first time since its institution, under the auspicious circumstances in which the Lord of Hosts has been pleased to place our country. The time we hope is nearly at hand, when the God of Peace will break the bow, and knap the spear, and give rest to a distracted and bleeding world! During the late troublous years, a moral and spiritual warfare has vigorously been carried on with the powers of darkness, and men of all Christian parties have united under the banner of the cross to spread the knowledge of the Redeemer throughout the world. If so much has been achieved in such times of difficulty, the Christian philanthropist rejoices, in the prospect of returning peace, that his means of usefulness will be greatly enlarged. How delightful must it be to such an one, to transfer, with hearty good-will, in years to come, to the purposes of promoting the work of salvation, that superfluous portion of good things, which, in time of war, was necessarily exacted from him, and remotely at least, for the purposes of destruction!

While we shall do well to sympathize with, and instruct the Hindoo, and the African, the peasant of Ireland, weeping also over his lack of knowledge, seems to exclaim in our hearing—"Hast thou but one blessing, O my father—Bless me, even ME also, O my father." Is it only in respect of Ireland, that our light is to be put under a bushel? While other talents are suitably employed, is that given for the use of the Irish to be hidden in the napkin? The Committee hope better things of the British public; and that while their Christian beneficence continues to run in various channels, it will flow much more deeply and widely than it has yet done over the uncultivated parts of Ireland. Then shall "the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose."

In confidence of the unspeakable importance of their object—the purity of their motives—and the legitimacy of their endeavours—the Committee anticipate a considerable augmentation of pecuniary ability; that the work, in which they are engaged, may be carried forward on a still more enlarged scale of usefulness, and that, in the great day of account, unnumbered thousands of the Irish poor may stand forward to evidence, "that their labours were not in vain in the Lord."

APPENDIX.

EXTRACTS OF CORRESPONDENCE.*

From an Agent of the Society. June 28, 1813.

THE promptness with which the Committee have ordered a further supply of Books, has given additional energy in accomplishing the plan communicated in my last; and I trust, by the time of their arrival, every thing will be fully arranged to dispose of them to the greatest advantage in regions hitherto unpierced by the rays of divine truth. I have the pleasure now of communicating the result of Mr. C——'s Tour through the greater part of the County of L——, parts of the Counties of D—— F—— and R——; he having returned a few days since, grateful to the Lord for the protection, guidance, and success with which he has been favoured, and more deeply impressed than ever with the awful state of Popish ignorance in which the people of this county are involved. Yet, from the manner in which he was received, the joy the people manifested on hearing of the Society's benevolent Plan for the education of their children, and the friends providentially raised up in every place to assist and encourage him, he had abundant evidence of the Lord's gracious designs to prosper the work. Being furnished with a testimonial from me, and some letters from a gentleman who was well known in those parts, he waited on the resident Clergy of the different parishes, was well received of them all, and had every assurance of their concurrence and friendly support. Some Priests also, to whom he communicated the Plan of Education, seemed to be friendly, and promised their assistance; and a Priest I met in S——, with whom I had had much conversation on the subject, was particularly useful: he was not at home when his extensive parish was visited; but on his return, finding some Schools established in it, he encouraged the poor to send their children, and sent a letter to me by one of the masters.

On the borders of the Counties of L—— and R—— the people in one parish, though opposed by the Priest, received with much satisfaction the offer of the Schools, and expressed great joy at the prospect of having the Scriptures read to them in Irish; and several of them requested, that whenever C—— visited that country, he would make their house his home. He succeeded in fixing sixteen additional Schools in the County of L——, two in the County of F——, five in the County of D——, four in the County of C——, and five in the County of R——, thirty-two in all. The prospect of getting half price for such of their other pupils as commit the Scripture to memory, was a strong inducement to the Masters to engage, though this cannot be productive until supplied with Testaments, which will be but a small expense, though pregnant with the greatest good, and calculated to benefit those to whom the Society's exertions could not in any other way extend. D——, and other of our former pupils, now Masters, I am happy to say, appear to be well calculated for the work of the Society.

Blessed be God, from the sons of the aliens he has raised a host to help against the mighty! It must be a matter of joy to the Society, that, excepting M—— and myself, all now employed in their work here are such as have been rescued from the delusion and darkness of Popery. I lament to learn, from the report given in the Magazines, that the Funds of the Society are so inadequate! Surely the friends of religion in England must be ignorant of the importance of the object! If it were duly estimated, no Society would receive more ample support; nor do I believe there is one that has been favoured with more striking marks of the Divine approbation.

Since my last, I have had the company of B—— H—— for some time; and what I have to communicate respecting him, is highly satisfactory. He continues, with unremitting zeal, to pursue the line laid out for him; occupied, in every village where he lodges, in reading the Irish Testament to the people, and labouring to impress on their minds the joyful tidings therein contained. He represents his hearers in general as greatly affected; and frequently the anxiety of many in the families where he lodges, to hear more from him; prevents his rest until near day. Indeed, the attention of numbers in the vicinity of the Schools, and in the villages where he and others in connexion with the Society visit, is strongly turned to the Scriptures, notwithstanding the opposition of the Priests. The Irish Testament has obviated innumerable objections; some call it their own Scriptures, and some the Douay; and could it be generally read, the advantages might be incalculable. I scarcely ride out but I meet many whose minds have been visited with a dawn of light from this source.

When the Deputation from the Hibernian Society explored the state of religious instruction in this country, how deplorable was the picture which they then beheld! The pleasing alteration which has since taken place, while it calls for gratitude, and encourages renewed efforts, is but the beginning, I trust, of good things to come.

From the same. July 28, 1813.

S—— has just returned from his survey of a part of the extensive district in which C—— established the Schools mentioned in my last; his report is most favourable, considering the time the Schools have been formed. C—— has been employed, since my last, in executing the design he entertained of visiting the Schools in T—— and L——, which go on well, and without open or avowed opposition. The Schools here continue to recommend themselves strongly to every unprejudiced observer; not so, however, in other parts. The Rev. Rector of B—— thus writes me in his letter of the 20th instant: “Having, with some expense and trouble, fitted up a house for the purpose of instructing the children of this parish, I am sorry to inform you, that my intentions, with those of the Society, are completely frustrated by the bigotry of the Priest, who will not permit any of the Roman Catholic children, under pain of having their parents excommunicated, to enter a School kept by a Protestant Master. There are two Schools lately established near this town, by Mr. C——, but they have been suppressed by the same person, and the Masters deprived of a livelihood: the children in these Schools were to be instructed only in those things required by the Society.” I had before intimation that the same Priest had effectually dispersed H——’s School; but whether the others in the County of G—— have met the like treatment, I have yet to learn. These are not the only instances of a revival of hostility from this quarter since I last wrote, though none but those mentioned have been dispersed. The Priests in the neighbourhood of our Schools in the County of L——, who appeared moderate and friendly in the beginning, changed their conduct in proportion to the appearance of good which the Schools were likely to effect: their hostility, however, being providentially restrained until the Masters had in a great degree been liberated from their influence, by the daily attention their situation obliged them to give to the Scriptures, the evil was prevented, the Masters remained firm in their purpose to persevere, and the people in general seemed inclined to side with the Masters; and, as the Priests had pronounced our authorized version of the Testament to be heretical, in many places, Douay Testaments were procured, and, by the help of the Masters, and others equally qualified, a comparison and strict enquiry took place; the result of which invariably was, our Testaments were acquitted of heresy, and the Priests suspected of being actuated by motives very unfavourable to their character. It is a fact, that wherever the Schools prevail, priestly influence receives a shock; and I am now beginning to look on their opposition as a matter of course, and of no very serious consequence; though, that it is not most seriously the reverse, is manifestly the finger of God.

From the same. September 27, 1813.

THE wish of the Society for the extension of its Schools, which your last communicated for our encouragement and animation, has been anticipated. C—— is on his tour for that purpose, and never was a man more inclined to extend the Schools and direct them to their proper object. He is accompanied by C—— and D——; K—— remains behind, only until C—— writes me that he has fixed on the sphere of his action. Another of C——'s pupils has taken charge of the School thus vacated by D——. C—— proceeds on his mission with the most respectable credentials, all which are necessary for his introduction unto, and safety in, those places where he is not known. Members of Parliament and Magistrates have given him certificates under their hand and seal, bearing ample testimony to the respectability of his character, the utility of the Society's Schools, and that he is an Inspector under the Society; and in each of those certificates are mentioned, and also described, the young men who accompany him. This measure, I trust, will also have a considerable influence on the Masters, who will feel themselves sanctioned by, and under the protection of, gentlemen of respectability and consequence. S—— proceeds immediately to the Counties of M—— and G——, remote from M——'s district. He will have the ready assistance and co-operation of the Rev. Mr. S—— and the Rev. Mr. F——, in the County of R——. E—— is constantly employed in our home department, and in the absence of the others has full employment every day. Every thing is going on prosperously. The reports from the Inspectors are most pleasing; committing the Scriptures to memory daily is established in every School, which, with reading in the Irish Testament, are carefully attended to; and the Schools are likely to be blessed, not only in breaking up the fallow ground, by teaching to read the Scriptures, and thus preparing the way for the appointed means of salvation, but I doubt not they are designed of God for raising up many to disseminate the truths of the Gospel through the darkest parts of this kingdom.

H—— has just returned from an extensive tour in those parts, where he has laboured since I communicated the last intelligence respecting him. He represents, that everywhere he met with the greatest attention, and that the people were greatly affected on hearing the Scriptures read to them. He abode in many places where the prospect of success seemed to demand it much longer than he had any occasion, on the score of vending his little wares; but, lest he should be burdensome in such places, he used to travel in the neighbourhood during the day, and return in the evening to resume his pleasing exercise of reading to the collected villagers his Irish Testament.

From the same. Oct. 23, 1813.

IN the County of M——, all the Schools under the care of the Rev. Mr. S—— continue without interruption. The Scriptures are read in each, and committed to memory. The Inspectors report of the one School that remains under the Rev. Mr. F——, is most pleasing. We have still one School on the borders of the County of G——, under a Protestant, and one in that County kept by a Catholic; how long they may be allowed to remain, is uncertain. S——, the Inspector, received much abuse from a Priest in the County of M——, for seeking to establish a School. This gentleman calls them Proselyting Schools, and, I am told, has been violent in his complaints against them to Lord D——. C——'s Schools have been happily preserved from violent opposition as yet, but the principle exists; for the cessation of opposition here, cannot be attributed to a change of sentiment in our former opposers. The account D—— gave me of the way he proceeded with the Schools, his employment, in constantly reading to the families where he lodges at night his Irish Testament, and with what anxiety he is followed by many adults, who wish to read the Irish Testament, rejoiced me much, and increased my anxiety for the prosperity of the blessed cause the Lord has honoured us with promoting. The effect of S——'s report on my spirits, rendered this cordial truly gratifying; and never was I more animated to go forward. I have been particularly refreshed at hearing, that in all this district, committing the Scripture to memory, as far as the very scanty supply of Testaments they had rendered it practicable, has been particularly attended to; and the Masters have been most anxious to promote it, as the surest way to forward their own interest. D——'s description of crouds of poor children, mostly naked, and some of them very young, repeating fluently and correctly, whole Epistles, or considerable portions of Scripture, drew out my heart in gratitude to God. Another encouraging circumstance he mentioned. The appearance of our young Sub-inspectors has had the most animating effect on the grown pupils in the Schools. Beholding them, who a few years since were poor boys like themselves, now decently clad, respectable, and vested with authority, gives them hopes that, by attention, and a proficiency in the Scriptures, they may themselves attain a similar post of honour; and this has operated as a most forcible stimulus to diligence.

From the same. October 26, 1813.

I AM fully convinced, that extending the Schools, and conducting them with a view to communicate scriptural information, is the only way wherein the labors of the Society can at all be turned to advantage at present. This conclusion I make from my knowledge of the fact. I believe the Schools are intended of God, to prepare for the reception of Divine truth, and facilitate its progress; nor are their utility to be calculated merely as a great preparation for future good; past experience proves, that the Divine Word taught in them, will be found by many, to be the savor of life unto life, while the effect on the great mass of the population is, preparing the way of the Lord.

From the same. November 22, 1813.

THE Schoolmasters are under the necessity to make returns to me at least quarterly. At such Meetings, aided as I am by the Inspector's returns lying before me, the investigation that takes place, seldom fails of furnishing me with every requisite information. In those Meetings, I have an opportunity of impressing on them the nature and value of the Word of God, the importance of their work, and, if conscientiously attended to, its probable happy effects on generations yet unborn: and this, under circumstances more favourable than an address to them at their Schools, where the presence of some might make them afraid to attend to my observations. In this way I can reach to a circle of twenty miles and upwards in every direction, as all the Masters within that distance, or even a greater, find no difficulty to attend upon me.

The Established Minister of the large Parish of S—, is our steady friend; he has promised watchful attention to our School in his Parish, and to those in the neighbourhood. The merciful continuation of peace and prosperity in our Schools, leaves me very little to add, but that they are on the increase. C— in his letter, affords but little matter for interesting extracts, it being little more than repetitions of being well received every where, and meeting in all parts those who are likely to be active and zealous friends to the Institution. He has planted many Schools, and is in the highest spirits. Wherever he goes, his first visit is paid to the Clergyman of the Establishment; and in the Diocese of —, a representation of the nature of his mission having been made to the Bishop by one of the higher Clergy, C—'s testimonials were laid before him, and he received, through the same channel, the Bishop's approbation, liberty to erect schools in his Diocese, and a promise of his countenance and support. He also calls upon the Dissenting Minister, if there be one, nor does he omit the Catholic Priests; and to conciliate them, he makes no engagement with a Catholic Master, without a recommendation from the Priest if he be friendly; and this may be safely done on our terms of, no Bible no School.

From what I mentioned, the Committee will perceive, that the repetition of their command to go forward, is attended to. Through the Divine blessing on their labors, already do their Schools cover the whole of this county, including its wildest recesses, and the greater part of the Counties of M— and L—. Situations for Schools have been gained, notwithstanding the rallied efforts of the enemy, in the County of G—, and the darkest part of the County of D—; the Counties of R—, C—, F—, T—, M—, and A—, benefit by their labors; and the Counties of L—, and L—, will, I trust, soon be enrolled among their triumphs. Blessed be God, no party views animate our zeal. The gathering of the people to Shiloh, is the prize before us; and in this, we will unite in the will and purpose of Him, who has set his King upon his holy hill of Sion, giving him the Heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for his possession. We know, he can give a nation a spiritual existence in a day; yet he honours the faith, patience, and persevering zeal of his people, in their weak attempts to promote the best interests of their fellow-sinners, and encourages them by the many instances of the greatest events, having their origin in small beginnings. The Society's labors, this small cloud not long since risen on our horizon, is charged with the Water of Life, expanding as it moves, and is destined, I trust, to remove the dearth of the land. Our Isles have been mercifully preserved by the sheltering wings of Omnipotence, from the storm which has desolated all around. And what justice has effected in neighbouring nations, where priestly domination has been broken with the rod of iron, may be graciously effected here, by the the small still voice of the Gospel, without garments rolled in blood.

From the same. Dec. 1813.

DIRECTING the attention of all the pupils to the Scripture is fully justified, from their tendency to instil principles of morality and loyalty, and secure the domestic happiness of all, and the peace and order of Society: All our Sub-Inspectors have been with me this week. The new and old Schools in D——'s district, (nineteen in number,) are going on remarkably well; they are in the northern parts of this County, and the County of L——. C——'s report is not so pleasing. However, from the conversation I have had with the Masters, as they have come for payment, I find that they have been fully instructed in the rules and regulations. I have caused them individually to sign the regulations, and I doubt not, in a short time, we shall have those Schools in proper order. K——'s district consists entirely of new Schools in the County of F——. He gives an excellent report of all the Schools there, and represents the Masters in general as very proper characters; nor has he any doubt of his being able to carry all our regulations into effect, and to ensure due attention to the Scriptures. The people in that County are very anxious to know how to read the Irish, and as he has nearly prepared the Masters, Irish Classes may be formed in each. Finding, from conversation with him, that there are no Schools in F——, a populous, wild, and barren district, adjoining his present circuit, I shall empower him, on his return after the vacation, to fix Schools where they are most wanting in that County. This I can do with all confidence in his prudence and integrity; and they can be included with those now under his care, and bring him in the western extreme, in contact with the district now under the care of D——. After the vacation, I am to dispatch S—— with a quantity of books. He is to take a general survey of the whole of the districts of our Sub-Inspectors, and if any yet remain deficient, to bring them fully under the regulations. S——, in his last tour of inspection, visited the Schools in the Counties of M—— and R——, under Rev. Mr. S——, which were doing well. One Master in the County of G—— had given up; however, another was appointed, who is a Protestant, and in a wild part of the County of M——. He found the School of T——, formerly appointed by him, doing remarkably well. T—— was the first we could get in that County to brave the terror of the Priest; he has been with me since; and from my conversation with him, I am not without hopes of his being, from principle, heartily in the interest of the Society. On parting, I gave him the last large Bible I had, for his own use, and he declared he prized it higher than the stipend I paid him: he is a sensible and determined man. The Schools in that district were ten. M—— is employed in the County of S——, and in occasional visits to the County of L——.

From the same. Jan. 22, 1814.

IN my last, I mentioned the necessity of a further supply of English Testaments; the increase of the number of our Schools requires them, and the zeal and activity which the hope of reward has excited among the Masters, to cause their pay-scholars to commit the Scriptures to memory, will require a considerable addition to what would be otherwise sufficient. The Committee has been apprized of the effects of the hostile influence of the Priest on our Schools on the borders of the Counties of R—— and G——. On the dispersion of H——'s School, a young man, son to the Mr. —— formerly mentioned by me, who had been here for some time under the tuition of C—— at our large School, opened a School in the same place; and, notwithstanding the opposition he met with, he had for a time about forty Catholic children. The Priest, however, succeeded in a fresh effort, and they were all withdrawn; but the young man persevered, and has now upwards of twenty of the children of those who were formerly induced, by representations and threats, to remove them. Mr. C—— being written for by the Parish Priest, he, with one of the Society's School Inspectors, waited on him; and on the Priest being informed that the English Testament was one of the Books for the reading class of the Schools, he said he would not suffer such Books, and that it was the word of the devil.

I was happy to have the good opinion I entertained of T——, our Master in K—— School, so amply confirmed by the account given me by Mr. C——, who visited him on his way to this country. K—— is a small town in the County of M——, where there are but few Protestants, and darkness reigns all around. We had made several attempts to fix a School here formerly, but in vain. One man undertook it, and was supplied with books; but, after keeping it for a time, from the representations of the Priest, he gave it up.

Hoping that the example of S—, and the good that may result from his School, will open a way for the establishment of more in that wretched country, I shall direct S— to attend to that object on his next visit there; for we may have hopes of success in the darkest and most barbarous parts, from our success in K—. As our Schools in every quarter continue to enjoy peace, I have no additional intelligence of any importance to communicate, except that several of our Inspectors, after attending to the Schools through the day, are employed until bed-time reading the Irish Testament to the families with whom they lodge; and as they remain but three days in one place, and frequently but one night with one family, their sphere of usefulness is extensive.

From the same. Jan. 25, 1814.

I SINCERELY participate in the satisfaction the number and regulations of our Schools have communicated to the Committee, and trust, that not only we, but posterity, will rejoice in the blessed effects of the Institution. What I long since mentioned, as one effect happily produced, invariably continues; wherever they are established, they excite attention to that Word which is mighty through God, and promise to be the most powerful auxiliary to the Bible Societies; for, were it not for them, (at least in those parts,) annunciations of the formation of Bible Societies, and the facility with which the Scriptures might be obtained, would create no more anxiety respecting that unknown Book, than if it were a Treatise on the Transit of Venus.

From the same. Feb. 22, 1814.

THE Committee may rest satisfied, that bringing the whole process of the education afforded in our Schools to bear on the grand point, the communication of Scriptural information, has been, and will be, through the Divine guidance and support, my constant aim; the one object of my pursuit. Our Lord has already owned this, in blessing his Word to the teachers and taught. I have lately had pleasing hopes of more than one of the Masters, not hitherto noticed; and, I doubt not, much bread has been cast already on the waters, in the Schools, for which we shall have reason to give thanks, when our Lord gathers together his full harvest. D—, one of the Masters in the County of D—, will, I trust, be of signal use; he has been with me, and I had every reason to believe his protestations, that he more highly prized the information he has received from the Scriptures, than all the emolument he can ever expect in the service of the Society: his heart seems deeply engaged in the work.

From the same. Feb. 28, 1814.

H— has just called, and the report he now makes, is more encouraging than any that he has hitherto given. Besides the general attention which his labors in the sequestered hamlets and remote villages excite, he thinks he can now with safety pronounce, that they have been blessed, to the real conversion of at least ten individuals; all of whom have given the trying proof of their sincerity, by renouncing the Popish communion, and committing to the flames the idols of their former devotion and confidence. The poor man is in great spirits, and is resolved, through the Divine support, to persevere, notwithstanding the persecution to which he and his are exposed.

From the same. March 28, 1814.

I CAN also state, with great satisfaction, that all the Schools daily manifest improvement, and that so forcibly is the attention of the Masters directed to the great object, that they now for the most part insist on their pupils committing the Scriptures to memory during the time they are necessarily absent from School, attending the work of the season, and for which they are not to be paid.

From the same. April 27, 1814.

THERE are but few of the Masters of any standing, but are considerably benefited; most of them have other ideas of the nature of Christianity, its Divine truths and obligations, than they formerly entertained, and are consequently liberated from the baneful influence of the traditions and prejudices they derived from their fathers; so that the beneficial effects of the labors of the Society, are invaluable. Respecting the Masters, I may add, what will, I am sure, give much satisfaction to the Committee; their situation, as to the comforts of life, is much improved since their connection with the Society: indeed, considering the smallness of their stipend, it is impossible to account for a change so striking, in any other way, but by attributing it to the Divine blessing on the provision afforded by the Society. Those that came to me at first in rags, or with a borrowed upper garment, to hide the want of other clothing, are now comfortably clad, and make a decent appearance; nor are they less improved in their manners and general information.

From your repetition of the animating command, "Go forward," I conclude, the plan for that dark and hostile region, the County of G—, has met the approbation of the Committee. I trust I shall be soon prepared for this. The regulations for the Schools, though they increase for the present the labor of the inspection, will, when established fully, make Inspectors less necessary, and I may spare some I have now employed in this way, for Masters in whom I can confide, to introduce the leaven into that County. They are all Priest-proof; and although they would in the days of their ignorance tremble at the frown of a Priest, they would now cheerfully set at defiance the whole artillery of the vatican; besides, they are all good Irish scholars, and can wield the sword of the Spirit in that language with considerable skill. If through patient perseverance they can succeed, I doubt not of many applications from the native Masters, who will be encouraged by their example to transgress the traditions of the elders, and, allured by a view to their own interest, to take a part with the Schools against the principalities and powers whose reign in darkness is yet undisturbed there.

As I expected, the removal of the Rev. Mr. S — to the County of R —, — has opened an effectual door there. Through his representations, the Rev. Archdeacon D — sees the nature and importance of the Society's plan, and will, I trust, shortly devote to this service a part of what he liberally bestows in a religious way.

They have already recommended and sent to me, for instructions for a time, two Masters; and I had to write out minute directions and instructions for a third, who, from lameness, could not travel. The Masters who called here, arrived since I began this letter, and I was interrupted the greater part of the day, in instructing and conversing with them. One of them, a pretty intelligent country School-Master, never before heard of the Bible! what must be the state of the country where this man has taught for many years? I trust a bright day is now dawning on it. The poor man seemed much impressed with what he heard, and begged a Bible for himself. What may we not hope as to the dissemination of Divine truth, in a wild mountainous part of the County of L —, where, before the establishment of one of our Schools, the Word of God was as little known, and as rare as the Alcoran. Boys may now be met almost literally naked, who have committed to memory forty chapters of the New Testament. The established Clergy very willingly undertake the inspection of the Schools, and in general are much interested. While writing this, I had to stop to write by K —, who returned this day to the F — district, to four of them: the Rev. Mr. J —, the Rev. Dr. O —, the Rev. Mr. R —, and the Rev. Mr. F —, all of whom give great attention to the Schools. I have nothing to note at present, respecting these Schools, but their increase, peace, and progressive improvement. The whole machinery of the Inspection is in motion; M — and C — in this county, D — in the County of L —, and S — in the Counties of D — and C —. K — set off this day, after the Easter Vacation, for the part of the County of L —, in the direct road to E —; in which wild district he has established a few Schools since my last; and thence to the County of F —, where they are also increased, and well attended to, by the Rev. gentlemen I have mentioned; but alas, all this district has not a Testament; my last supply, with some I borrowed of the Bible Society in S—, and some I bought, did not extend to them. I trust those you give the invoice of in your last, may shortly arrive: I have already made an arrangement for their being forwarded to the County of C—, without expense on their arrival.

From another of the Society's Agents. Dec. 29, 1813.

THE Schools in this neighbourhood are thirty-two in number, and in these there are about two thousand free Scholars, one thousand of which are charged to the Society. We have now the heartfelt satisfaction to see Schools planted and prospering in one of the wildest, most remote, and neglected counties of Ireland.

As to the progress which the boys are making, I think you will allow that it is very considerable, when you find that more than a third part of the first set have read through the Bible, committed whole books of the New Testament to memory, can write well, and work the Rule of Three; consequently, numbers of them have now left the Schools, and are gone to learn a trade. Some of the girls are married, and teach their husbands to read the Word of God.

Now, who knows but we may live to see this handful of seed, sown upon the top of the mountains, shake like Lebanon, and this wilderness become a fruitful field. At all events, our duty is, in the morning to sow our seed, and in the evening not to withhold our hand; for we know not which shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good. Let us, therefore, work while it is day, for the night is fast approaching.

From the Rev. D— C— of B—. June 8, 1813.

I REQUEST you, Sir, to present my warmest thanks to the Committee of the Hibernian Society, for their liberal Donation of 10*l*. I shall now report, for the satisfaction of the Committee, the progress our youth are making in reading and understanding the Word of God. Having occasion to be a good part of the winter from home, I did not find it convenient to hold our Christmas Examination sooner than the 4th of April, upon which day our youth met for that purpose. The First Class had to repeat the 22d and 103d Psalms, 52d and 53d chapters of Isaiah, the 19th of John, 26th of Acts, 3d of Galatians, and 1st of Revelations. These interesting portions of Scripture, where the way of life through faith in Christ is clearly revealed, were recited by them with facility. The Second Class had to recite the 53d of Isaiah, and 3d of John. A third Class of boys had the 3d and 4th of Romans to repeat. A part of the First Epistle by John, was well said by a class of little girls. The 10th of Romans, and 26th of Acts, were repeated by another class of girls; and the 23d Psalm, and 3d of Acts, were repeated by the last class. The youth appeared eager to excel each other, as they saw every scholar rewarded according to his merit. The letterers and spellers were also rewarded, to encourage them to press forward. The Curate of this parish, and several other respectable persons, were highly gratified, at hearing the youth not only rehearse the appointed selections of Scripture, but also answer, with readiness, the questions proposed to them therefrom. Several of our scholars are the children of poor ignorant parents, who had no prospect of being instructed either in spelling or reading, had it not been afforded in this way. Their morals are greatly improved, and industry and honesty shine conspicuously in their deportment: they are very diligent to finish the work assigned them by their parents and masters, that they may spend the time they thus gain, in reading the Holy Scriptures, or committing them to memory.

The last week I went into a glover's workshop, where one of our scholars is an apprentice, and I found that the little girl had her Bible on a table before her, that she might, every spare moment, take it up to learn her task. A day or two after, I visited a house where another of our scholars lives; who, while spinning, had the Bible beside her, resting upon an iron staple driven into a wall; and it was spread open, so that she might cast her eye upon it while spinning. It is truly pleasant to see youth employed in this way, instead of storing their memory with that which would poison their minds. The scholars appear to be very grateful for having the Scriptures so abundantly distributed among them, and they now seem anxious to have the precious Bible circulated among others. This will appear from the following circumstance. Some time ago, our friends here purposed, according to their ability, to collect, in aid of a branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in this neighbourhood; and our intention was publicly announced, that all who were disposed might contribute. On the day appointed, a considerable number came forward with their free-will offerings, in aid of this most excellent cause; and some of our scholars, hearing and seeing what was done, felt it their duty to assist us. They therefore applied to their mothers for flax, and said they would spin, over and above their task, what would amount to a piece of money which passes here for ten pence. Their mothers gave flax, and the consequence was, that I received, from nine of our poor scholars, 7s. 6d. The plan of causing the youth to notice, and prove from Scripture, what is right and what is wrong, we have found productive of the most salutary effects. One of our scholars lately sold some yarn in a fair in this town, and on going home she found that the purchaser had overpaid her. Having made this discovery, she went back immediately, in search of the merchant, and, having found him, gave him back the extra payment. Another, who had been overpaid in receiving change, when purchasing tobacco in a grocer's shop, went back with the overplus; knowing it to be wrong from God's Word, to keep what belonged to another. Upon the whole, I trust much good has been already done on our poor children, and to the Lord's name be the glory. Our six Schools are going on very well this season. I trust, the means which are now used for the extensive circulation of the Holy Scriptures, connected with the attention which is paid in Britain, and parts of Ireland, to the instruction of the rising generation, will, by God's blessing attending them, be productive of much fruit; and that, of many who now enjoy these precious advantages, it may be said, "A seed shall serve Him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation; they shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born." Thus may a seed be raised up, who shall convey the same glorious truth to others, when those who now occupy the field shall be sleeping in the dust. The Scriptures assure us, that the "name of Jesus shall endure for ever, and that all men shall be blessed in him."

From the same. Jan. 20, 1814.

I now send you a brief account of an Examination held at B—, on the 29th of August last, of the scholars who attend the Sunday-School in that town. I can with truth certify, that our scholars had larger portions committed to memory at the last Examination, than they had at any former period; which will appear obvious, by mentioning the number of Psalms and chapters which a few of the scholars had committed, verbatim, to memory since they were last examined. One girl had learned fourteen Psalms, another thirty-four, two others fifty-five each. The total number of Psalms committed to memory, was 178. Some of the boys had been pretty diligent, though not so much so as the girls. One boy could say four chapters, another nine, a third ten. The total number of chapters which had been learned and rehearsed, was 142, making in all 320 psalms and chapters. The Scholars who excelled were rewarded according to their merit. Inferior and superior Bibles and Testaments were given on this occasion; and I find that this mode of distribution has a powerful influence to induce the youth to vie with one another. It is with pleasure I report that not only Protestant children, but also Roman Catholics, are instructed in the Word of God. The other Schools which I superintend in the neighbourhood are going on very well.

From a Dignitary of the Established Church, to one of the Society's Agents. April 25, 1814.

I RETURN you my humble and cordial thanks for the obliging readiness with which you acceded to my wish, expressed to you by the Rev. Mr. —, in appointing the bearer of his letter to be one of the School-masters, under the patronage of the excellent Society whose cause you have undertaken, in this county, to conduct. I hope I shall not be neglectful in the duty of visiting, as you have appointed me. I had no personal knowledge of the bearer of the Rev. Mr. —'s letter, but he was recommended to me by parishioners of mine, as a proper person to keep a School in a place in my parish where one was wanting; and I was applied to, to countenance and assist him therein: when it occurred to me, to get for him the appointment which you have now conferred upon him. As you are so very kind as to offer to appoint others that I should recommend, in places where it would be adviseable, I will now take the liberty of mentioning one (who is now keeping school near —) as a proper person to keep another School, under my eye. I purpose placing him in the parish of — (the duties of which belong to me) and county of —. He is a Protestant, which the other is not, and is well spoken of by those who know him. If you approve of appointing him, (and the situation in which I would propose fixing him, is one in which such a School is much wanting, and would be most desirable,) I will send him to you for instructions, &c. I am very happy to learn from you that the London Hibernian School Society are about addressing the Irish public: I hope and believe they will meet with (according as they deserve) a prompt and cordial co-operation. I, for my part, should feel it my duty, and a happiness which I have much wished for, to be a subscriber to an institution so nobly philanthropic, the moment I had an opportunity.

What an exhibition of that pure and disinterested benevolence, that is to be expected only from such as have felt the force of the saying, "Freely ye have received."

WE, the Auditors appointed by the Committee, have examined the above Account, and find a Balance of Seventy-One Pounds and Eleven Pence in the hands of the Treasurer.

April 29, 1814.

THOMAS HAYTER,
JOHN FLETCHER.

** It should be particularly observed, that the School Accounts being made up only to the end of the year 1813, there is the sum of between Three and Four Hundred Pounds, now due to the School-masters; for which the Treasurer expects daily to be drawn on.
